USS S-39 (SS-144)	Aug 13, 1942

USS Cochino (SS-345)	Aug 26, 1949

The Ship's Bell was rung twice for the nineteen USSVI NOVA Base members on Eternal Patrol.

HISTORICAL MOMENT

Our Base Historian, Richard Lowry, was not able to attend today's meeting and luncheon, so the Base CDR read Richard's presentation on the USS Flier (SS-250).

USS Flier's (SS-250) keel was laid down 30 October 1942 by Electric Boat Company of Groton, Connecticut. She set sail on her first war patrol 21 May 1944 and encountered her first enemy shipping west of Luzon on 4 June. Flier had a successful patrol, sinking four ships totaling 9,500 tons and damaging a fifth ship of 13,500 tons.

Enroute to Flier's second war patrol Flier had been ordered to follow previous submarine's tracks through a Japanese minefield and the narrow channels into the South China Sea. Commander John Crowley was following the track on the surface, unaware that the Japanese had recently replenished the minefield. Suddenly a massive explosion shook the boat. The concussion threw men around on deck and ejected several through the hatch. Flier kept driving ahead at 15 knots as she sunk in less than thirty seconds. Seventy-one souls went down with the boat, leaving 13 men struggling in the water.

Crowley gathered the survivors together and they set out toward land. Seventeen and a half hours after their boat sank beneath their feet, Commander Crowley and four others reached the shore. Three more crewmembers had made it too. They survived in the jungle with the help of local tribesmen and they were rescued by USS Redfin on the night of August 30. Seventy-eight officers and men were lost in the sinking of Flier, but eight managed to survive against all odds.

MEETING MINUTES

The minutes of the June meeting were distributed by e-mail. There was no base meeting in July as we held the informal Dining Out / submarine movie review at Neighbor's Restaurant in Vienna.
